We Who Listened: Young Canadians Respond to the Holocaust Michael Ernest Sweet

This poignant little book is a collective diary of nearly 100 high school students in response to Alex Levin's story of surviving the Holocaust as told through his memoir "Under the Yellow & Red Stars". Between these covers are thoughts, reflections and even outbursts of emotion and intellect by some of our countries young souls as they listen and imagine the terror which unfolded long before their time. In this book students come to see how the Holocaust not only changed our world, but changed our country and our very community too. The Holocaust is world history, it is Canadian history, it is Jewish history, it is human history. Come read and see why.
