Choosing to design your life for a happy life is more important than trying to decide which career, degree or college one should pursue. It is apparent in the college planning process that most people seem to have this upside down and as a result do not end up with a happy life. They end up in the wrong career, huge student loans, and a life of quiet desperation. This book is an introductory book on creating your happy, best designed life first. It will open your understanding to a clearer path that will leave you knowing that creating a happy life supercedes all other choices in life. Instead of the typical herd mentality on living your life, why not take a fresh look at creating the life of your dreams first, then pursue the degree, the college and the career next. It puts you more on a happy journey rather than a dead end destination.
