Some people lead charmed lives. There is extra grace involved when the person who lives that life is as charming and irresistible as the author of this autobiography. The author seems to have just walked in the door full of enthusiasm as projects - films, plays, restaurants - were forming and fresh talents being born to which she offered her services. Bright and educated but not wielding one special talent, she proved to be endlessly improvisational working on films "Woodstock", "Marjoe", "Eraserhead", "The Last Waltz", etc. Some she offered to help had genius, Neil Young, Joni Mitchell, Marty Scorsese, David Lynch and others. Generally, she was just looking for work with people she might enjoy and the results were ingenious. The places you can go and the things you can experience with such an honest attitude and indestructible spirit are simply and beautifully described. Young women, especially, will thrill to see how a life can be created, and not just take the one they've been given. Other readers can enjoy a view from the wings of fame, revel in a life well-lived and realize that simple choices can lead to magic.
