Romina is now married with Raymond and they are off to start their life as husband and wife. With new challenges on the horizon... how will they deal with the troubles ahead?

Romina quickly finds out that marrying Raymond was the easy part; being his wife in life and in bed is where things get tricky. Being unable to perform her “duties” as a wife creates serious unrest in the Humes household.

As signs of Raymond’s secret begin to reveal themselves, Romina is thrown into a search for clues. When she starts to make an effort to be a better wife and homemaker, Raymond begins to see Romina in a new light. The two may be strangers living in the same house, but their defenses begin to drop, and their hearts begin to open.

When the newlyweds go to a town meeting together, Jeb Pickering, a troublemaker, attacks the couple. Raymond’s strength of body and character show Romina a glimpse into the unguarded heart of the man she married. She knows that she can overlook his deepest secrets, but can she let herself love and be loved by a man who doesn’t even know her real name?
