Heritage Lost: A Change In Emphasis Every age is in love with its own beliefs. "Heritage Lost" dares to shake our faith in the intellectual gods we take as "givens" today. Knowledge is not enough to create change. It is belief that motivates actions and shapes our attitudes. Knowledge has clarified our view of our world but to understand ourselves, we must examine beliefs and how they are formed. Emphasis shapes our beliefs forming who we are individually and collectively. In that sense mind, culture, and civilization evolve from the same sources. Thinking is linking, which your brain is constantly doing, but thinking is also contrasting which requires effort, and accepting the possibility that your assumptions may be wrong. Question today's zeitgeist. Search for the wisdom embedded in beliefs we threw off. Brain theory acknowledges that lost cultural norms address mental weaknesses that our faith in rationality ignores.
