Skunny Wundy and other Indian tales, Arthur Caswell Parker

1926. A wonderful collection of stories perfect for telling around the evening fire from Arthur Caswell Parker who was an archaeologist at Harvard's Peabody Museum and the New York State Museum, an ethnologist at the New York State Library and director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences. He was also an editor and an author, writing primarily on the history of the Iroquois. Parker was a member of numerous historical organizations and president of the Society of American Indians. A Seneca, on his father Frederick's side, he was the grandson of Nicholson Henry Parker, the brother of Ely Samuel Parker, U. S. Grant's military Secretary. Nicholson and Ely Parker were sons of William Parker who took the name of an English officer and descendants of Handsome Lake, the Seneca prophet.
